Where can we find the dress?

A new website providing all the latest of official information on the upcoming wedding of Prince William to Middleton was launched Wednesday.

Royal officials say the website, officialroyalwedding2011.org, will be regularly updated with new details about the April 29 ceremony, as well as photos, features, and video content. It also will be the first place where details of Middleton's dress will be revealed on the day of the wedding.

Their little black books

According to the Daily Mail, Middleton and William also are inviting old flames to their wedding.

He's charming, handsome and second in line to the throne, so it's no surprise Prince William had his fair share of female admirers before Middleton stole his heart. And with her natural poise, Middleton certainly turned heads before landing her Prince.

Their wedding will see Westminster Abbey filled with pretty gals and rugged chaps who all have one thing in common: a past flirtation with the future King and Queen of England.

It's been quite a week for news on Kate and Wills' big day—here are the juiciest scoops about the upcoming royal nuptials

He'll be there

Elton John, a close friend of the late Princess Diana, has admitted he got an invitation to the wedding of Prince William and Kate Middleton.

He said in an interview on Canadian TV that he and his partner, David Furnish, intended to attend the ceremony in Westminster Abbey. The 63-year-old famously performed a revised version of his hit song "Candle in the Wind" at the funeral of William's mother, Diana, also held at the abbey, in 1997.

It went on to sell tens of millions of copies and is the second-most-successful single of all time.

They will too

David Beckham will race across the Atlantic to make a crucial soccer match after the royal wedding.

He will get on a plane right after Prince William and Kate Middleton marry April 29 so he does not miss the L.A. Galaxy game stateside two days later.

Beckham, 35, told the Daily Mirror: "You don't say no to the future king of England."

And these guys

Middleton has invited the butcher, the postman and pub landlord from her village in Berkshire to her wedding.

A select handful of Bucklebury residents will rub shoulders with royalty and celebrities after receiving a gold-embossed invitation from the couple.

YOUR TURN

How do you explain a seeming uptick in anti-Semitic sentiments in pop culture? Are you satisfied with the explanations of those involved or do you think some of these remarks were misunderstood? E-mail kkyles@tribune.com to share your thoughts. Please include your full name, age and neighborhood in case we print your comment.

Galliano not the only anti-Semite

Is there a bigotry bug going around the celebrisphere?

If so, it must have infected fashion designer John Galliano, who professed himself a fan of the Fuhrer in a Parisian bar.

"I love Hitler," a slurring Galliano announces to unseen bar patrons in footage that surfaced this week. "People like you would be dead. Your mothers, your forefathers, would all be [bleep]ing gassed."

Galliano—who has since been booted from Christian Dior, condemned by Dior pitchwoman Natalie Portman and begun fighting criminal charges in France for a previous charge of race-baiting—later apologized for the offense. He released a statement suggesting he was provoked and has reportedly headed to rehab, the New York Times reports.

Wonder what the treatment plan is for other prominent pop figures.

The Midwest director of the Anti-Defamation League, which fights anti-Semitism, told me his office has been swamped of late, due to racial and religious insults from public figures, including Glenn Beck, Minister Louis Farrakhan, Galliano and Charlie Sheen.

Beck and Farrakhan are known, though certainly not excused, for extreme racial rhetoric. But it's surprising sitcom star Sheen—who racked up 1.3 million Twitter followers this week—is not drawing as much outcry for referring to "Two and a Half Men" creator Chuck Lorre by his Hebrew name, "Chaim Levine," during a rant-filled radio interview and a letter to TMZ.

Sheen claimed the name game was an effort to snap Lorre out of his "Hollywood" behavior, but the Anti-Defamation League's Lonnie Nasatir doesn't buy it.

"I can't speak for Sheen, but it raises the question of: Why the need to call him not only by Charles, but by a Jewish-sounding Hebrew name," Nasatir asked. "Why was that relevant?"

Further evidence of Sheen's possible bigotry comes courtesy of the New York Daily News. Brooke Mueller claims Sheen once sent her a text in which he referred to his current manager, who is Jewish, as a "stupid [sic] Jew pig," the Daily News reported Wednesday.

Mueller has an obvious ax to grind and Sheen has denied sending the message, but I'm reluctant to believe him given his "Levine" remarks.

For Nasatir's part, he expressed shock about the latest Sheen accusation yet he views this ugly, intolerant trend an odd "blip" in pop culture.

"In most of these cases, those who have made these types of remarks have been made to defend their actions, and in Galliano's situation, apologize," Nasatir said.

Hopefully, public disapproval will be a strong enough antidote for other public and private citizens infected with an ugly case of anti-Semitism. I'd hate to see this turn into an outbreak.

ON SECOND THOUGHT, NU PLANS TO INVESTIGATE SEX DEMO

Chicago Tribune

Northwestern University, fielding a torrent of criticism after a professor allowed students to view a live sex demonstration after his human sexuality class, now is grappling with the long-cherished tenets of academic freedom and their boundaries.

The university initially supported the actions of psychology professor J. Michael Bailey, saying in a statement released Wednesday that "the university supports the efforts of its faculty to further the advancement of knowledge." But by Thursday morning, Northwestern President Morton Schapiro announced that the school would investigate amid an unfolding scandal.

Schapiro said he is "troubled and disappointed" by the live sex toy demonstration in a campus auditorium last week, and that it was not in keeping with Northwestern's mission.

On Feb. 21, more than 100 students watched the optional, after-class demonstration, during which a woman lay down on a towel and allowed her fiancé to penetrate her with a device that looks like a machine-powered saw with a phallic object instead of a blade. The demo followed a discussion about kinky sex and female orgasms.

"I have directed that we investigate fully the specifics of this incident, and also clarify what constitutes appropriate pedagogy, both in this instance and in the future," Schapiro said in a prepared statement. "Many members of the Northwestern community are disturbed by what took place on our campus. So am I."

At issue is whether the demonstration is protected by the long-standing principle of academic freedom that allows faculty to teach controversial subjects. Questions center on whether the demonstration offered any educational value.

In a prepared statement Wednesday, Bailey acknowledged hesitating before allowing the couple to perform the sex act. He said that he decided to say yes after realizing his "inability to come up with a legitimate reason why students should not be able to watch such a demonstration."

Lance Gravlee, who teaches a human sexuality course at the University of Florida, said Bailey crossed the line of what could be considered pure academic pursuit.

"This case is so far on the other side of the line that it doesn't strike me as difficult to figure that out," Gravlee said. "I can't imagine, I just can't imagine doing something like this in a classroom."

Sarah Lowe, 19, a sophomore communications major, said she witnessed the demonstration and was not disturbed by it. She said that the warnings could have been more explicit, as she didn't really understand what she was about to see until the woman began removing all her clothes except for her bra.

"I was basically interested to see how it works," Lowe said. "There wasn't anybody who was angry or expressed disgust. They asked questions about the lives of the presenters. It was very informational, I feel, about the sexual diversity that exists."

Rachel Durchslag, executive director for the Chicago Alliance Against Sexual Exploitation, said that the demonstration could have traumatized students, especially if they had experienced sexual assault or abuse.

"We're relieved that the students apparently received some warning about the graphic nature of what they were about to see," Durchslag said. "It's worth investigating, however, if the value of what was learned was really worth risking that level of trauma."

As a former student, I say chill

power point

ARIEL ALEXOVICH

ariel@tribune.com

Yes, I took J. Michael Bailey's human sexuality class. And no, I didn't end up a sexual deviant or scarred for life.

Back in 2005, Bailey already was well known as an envelope-pusher, even if the national media hadn't gotten word of it yet. He was the popular psychology prof who'd lecture about his perhaps blush-worthy (but always clinical) sex research and, once the syllabus-learning was done, bring in panels of transvestites and sex addicts for optional post-class lectures.

The sex toy demonstration is a new one, but it's not unprecedented. Is it bizarre? Sure. But it doesn't make me ashamed of my school. If anything annoys me, it's that people outside of NU have raised this to a red-button issue.

As Bailey said, the students he teaches are "open-minded grownups," not "fragile children." Dear public, relax. ARIEL@TRIBUNE.COM

Midway is on target to become Southwest Airlines' largest hub, but on-time departures remain an issue. ALEX GARCIA/TRIBUNE

Flying too high?

Southwest's on-time performance suffering under airline's success

Chicago Tribune

Bags still fly for free on Southwest Airlines, but travelers are paying a price in other ways.

They're encountering more lapses in Southwest's hallmark on-time performance as the carrier departs from what once was its core principles of avoiding congested airports and shunning hub-and-spoke complexity in favor of getting passengers to their destinations on a single aircraft.

Revenue soared as Southwest added business destinations such as New York's LaGuardia Airport and connecting flights at Midway. But as it struggles to cope with increasing numbers of passengers and bags, Southwest risks tarnishing the reliability it has touted since the 1970s.

The problems are so acute at Midway, Southwest's largest hub, that CEO Gary Kelly is dispatching a team of 10 station managers from other airports next week to get to the bottom of the bottlenecks.

MORE GATES

To ease logjams, Southwest is leasing three more gates at Midway in addition to the 29 it holds. The carrier and city of Chicago are looking at the airport's approach runway lighting and other navigational aids to improve the flow of traffic into Midway. Phased installation could begin as early as 2012, said Karen Pride, spokeswoman for the city's Department of Aviation.

"I'm not satisfied with our on-time performance, and our people aren't either," Kelly recently told the Tribune.

Midway is growing in importance as Southwest expands. This summer, Midway is poised to overtake Las Vegas' McCarran International Airport as the largest airport Southwest serves, with 243 daily departures. Connecting passengers account for about half of Midway's traffic, said aviation consultant Ned Laird.

As Southwest struggles to synchronize flights at Midway, the airport has suffered, ranking last in on-time departures last year. Southwest didn't fare much better, finishing 10th among the top 18 U.S. carriers last year in a ranking compiled by the Bureau of Transportation Statistics.

Southwest also is coping with a surge in checked luggage, a byproduct of its "Bags Fly Free" marketing campaign. Transferring bags between flights under an extreme time crunch is perhaps the trickiest aspect of running an airport hub and a common cause of delays, Laird said.

"It's a great problem to have," said Greg Wells, Southwest's senior vice president for operations. "A lot of people want our product, and they want it because they get bags for free. ... We have had trouble in keeping up with all of these changes."

Gang rules: No crack, no beggars

Chicago Tribune

On the surface it reads like a rule book for a kids' club, filled with misspelled words and calling for dues and loyalty.

But the dues were for funerals and loyalty demanded they carry handguns.

And among the misspelled words was a reference to punishing members who shot innocent "by-standers."

The three-page list of rules for the Latin King street gang was quite serious, though. It is, in fact, a key piece of evidence against four high-ranking gang leaders on trial in federal court on charges they bore responsibility for violence and drug trafficking in the heart of the Mexican-American community in Chicago.

Prosecutors identified defendant Augustin "Tino" Zambrano as a gang corona, one of its three highest-ranking leaders in Chicago.

Though the first week of March is known within the gang as King Week, a time set aside to celebrate the Latin King nation, Zambrano instead sat beside co-defendants Vicente Garcia, Alphonso Chavez and Jose Guzman in the Dirksen U.S. Courthouse as the government began laying out its evidence in a case that includes drug conspiracy, racketeering and weapon assault charges.

The copy of the gang rules, which was seized from the home of a Latin King member in 2006, covers everything from the need to remove rival graffiti to restrictions on drug use—PCP and crack are outlawed. Members are told the exact late-night hours that they must "bust-out," or be on the street representing the gang.

And beggars are not even allowed in Little Village, the gang's turf, according to the rules.

Marathon registration closes

Registration for this fall's 34th annual Chicago Marathon has closed in record time this year, with 45,000 people signing up in just 31 days, organizers said Thursday. Last year, it took about seven weeks to fill up.

Americans waiting longer to have sex

We know what's going on in your bedroom.

However you define sex—oral, vaginal or something else—fewer American teens and young adults are having it, according to the latest statistics published Thursday by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Among 15- to 24-year-olds, 27 percent of males and 29 percent of females had never had sexual contact with another person. Only 22 percent of males and females that age reported being so virginal in 2002, when the last survey was conducted.

At the same time, white teens and young adults are more likely than black and Hispanic young people to start their sex lives having only oral sex. Among whites age 15-24, 57 percent say they had oral sex before ever having intercourse, as compared with

GAY AND BI STATS

Women were three times more likely than men to say they are bisexual, according to the survey's results. Among 15- to 44-year-old women, 13 percent say they've had a sexual experience with a woman. Only 5 percent of men in the same age group said they've been intimate with a man.

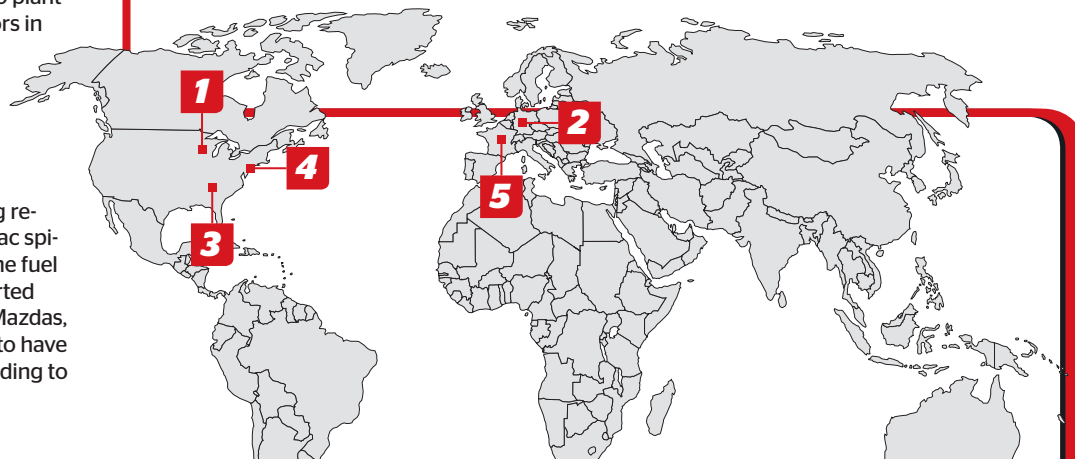

39 percent of black and Hispanic people their age.

"They may think they're doing something safer because they're having oral sex," said Anjani Chandra, a health scientist with the National Center for Health Statistics. In reality, Chandra said, while such behavior avoids the risk of pregnancy, it still puts young people at risk of acquiring a sexually transmitted disease.

Bears see what we don't

THAT'S WEAK

I'm not a football genius. Hell, I'm not even a football C student, but I've watched enough Bears action to know that Caleb Hanie proved he should be the No. 2 quarterback and that Chester Taylor was overpaid, at the least. Bears offensive coordinator Mike Martz doesn't agree. This week, he wouldn't say Hanie is No. 2 and said Taylor has a bright future in Chicago. I don't see it.

THAT'S WEAKER

I hate to do it, because I love the guy, but Kyle Korver's airball on a three-pointer that could have tied the game Wednesday night in Atlanta was perhaps the worst clutch shot I've seen since, well, LeBron James bricked a potential game-tying three against the Bulls on Feb. 24. You're paid specifically to make that shot, Kyle. Master it.

THAT'S THE WEAKEST

We've seen this show before. The Cubs play dreadfully on the field, then pummel each other in the dugout or take their anger out on the fans or criticize the TV announcers ... the list could go on. To make matters worse, the manager does nothing or even suggests "sometimes a little revolt is not bad." Don't be that guy, Mike Quade. The Cubs need to act like a professional organization even if they don't play like one.

WITH THE NFL SEASON HANGING IN THE BALANCE, OWNERS, PLAYERS EXTEND DEADLINE FOR DEAL

Chicago Tribune

With the expiration of the collective bargaining agreement just hours away Thursday evening, the NFL and the players' union made a rare definitive move.

They called a timeout.

The sides agreed to a 24-hour extension of the deadline, moving it to 11 p.m. Friday, to continue federal mediation talks.

People familiar with the negotiations but not authorized to speak about them indicated there's a good chance another extension could come Friday, one that could extend the deadline three to seven days or more.

Neither side is saying much, though players association head DeMaurice Smith said, "We appreciate [the fans'] patience as we work through this."

Mediator George H. Cohen revealed even less in a statement that read: "The parties have agreed to a one-day extension."

NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell told reporters: "We are working as hard as we can."

Vonnie Holliday, player representative for the Redskins, perhaps saying more than he should, told the Washington Post owners still haven't given the players a formal proposal, and told the NBC affiliate in Washington the two sides "are not in the same ballpark" and have not discussed major issues.

In speaking to reporters at the Super Bowl last month, attorney Jeff Pash, the NFL's lead negotiator, said a deadline extension was an option.

"If you're making progress, you can stop the clock," he said.

The timing is vital to both sides, who are arguing about how to divide the league's $9 billion in annual revenues.

The union needs to decertify before the CBA deadline, or must wait six months to do so. If the union decertifies—or essentially disbands as a union—the NFL arguably would be in violation of antitrust laws by locking out the players (although the league would dispute that in federal court) and the players could keep their case in the jurisdiction of U.S. District Judge David Doty of Minnesota. The league believes Doty has leaned heavily in the direction of the players.

The decertified union would seek an injunction from Doty's court to block the league from locking out the players. According to multiple reports, if the union decides to decertify, the lead plaintiffs in an antitrust lawsuit against the league would include quarterbacks Tom Brady, Peyton Manning and Drew Brees.

Anticipating the union's move, the NFL already has filed its case with the National Labor Relations Board calling any attempted decertification a "sham."

The NFL's biggest weapon is locking out of the players, which would not only get the case out of Judge Doty's court but also would apply maximum pressure to force a deal, particularly when those players started to miss paychecks during the regular season.

WHO'S ROOTING FOR WHO?

If NFL owners and players can't resolve their differences and the 2011 season disappears like vodka at Charlie Sheen's place, there will be a huge sports void in the fall. Sundays will be reduced to watching, what, early-season hockey and basketball? Maybe that wouldn't be such a bad thing—for those sports. But for everyone else, ugh. That's why nobody wants to see an NFL work stoppage, right? Or wrong? Here's who might be looking forward to and dreading an NFL lockout. REDEYE

LET'S HAVE A LOCKOUT

Fantasy football losers

Those fantasy players who can't figure out why they lose their league with Chad Henne at quarterback won't have to suffer through another miserable season.

College football

If you can't have the pro version, the college version will have to do. At least that's what every college athletic director across the country hopes.

NFL widows

The wives of die-hard NFL fans might actually be a priority this fall. Maybe.

NO LOCKOUT, PLEASE Fantasy football winners

Those fantasy players who know not to draft a kicker in the first round and are gunning for their fourth-straight league title might be reduced to playing fantasy basketball. Eww.

NBC

The Peacock network has the rights to televise the 2012 Super Bowl and could stand to lose tens of millions of dollars if it's canceled.

Indianapolis

Indy is the 2012 Super Bowl host town and, like NBC, would watch tens of millions of dollars, if not more, vanish if there's a work stoppage. Plus, the city would miss a chance to showcase its revitalized downtown to a billion people worldwide.

SPRING FLING

The day's news from Cubs and White Sox spring training.

THURSDAY'S RESULTS

» White Sox 6, Seattle 1: John Danks pitched two scoreless innings and Alex Rios hit the Sox's first homer of the spring.

FRIDAY'S GAMES

» Cubs at Kansas City, 2:05 p.m.: Matt Garza will make his first Cactus League start for the Cubs. Tyler Colvin also is scheduled to make his first start at first base.

» Sox at L.A. Angels, 2:05 p.m. MLB Network: Jake Peavy will make his first start for the Sox since leaving a game July 6. "Hopefully, it's a step in the right direction," he said. "The first time out we'll work on the fastball and see if it where it needs to be."

Bulls' new Butler

Butler
GETTY IMAGES

Rose off the mark

Derrick Rose is shooting 35 percent in five games since the All-Star break. "I'm getting the same shots," he said. "They're just not falling. I still have confidence. Me not shooting plays into their hands. They gotta fall one day."

All season, players and management have cited the Bulls' strong chemistry as part of the foundation for their success.

Rasual Butler gets it.

"Look, this is already a successful team," Butler said by phone Thursday afternoon. "They're third in the East for a reason. I'm just looking to fit in wherever."

The Bulls officially signed Butler on Thursday, one day after the veteran swingman cleared waivers from his buyout agreement with the Clippers. He didn't attend Thursday's practice but will participate in the team shootaround Friday.

With 13 players now, somebody will be inactive for Friday's game against the Magic. Butler, 31, said he turned down interest from other contenders like the Celtics and Thunder because he appreciated the Bulls' honesty about his role and it felt like the best fit.

"I knew they had a little interest in me before the (trade) deadline," Butler said. "I know they need a little more outside shooting. Coach (Tom) Thibodeau and (general manager) Gar Forman were really honest with me letting me know the guys in the rotation are already doing a really good job."

"But I liked Coach Thibodeau's approach and how serious he is. I was drafted by Pat Riley, so I know about serious people. I respect that."

Butler said he is friends with Keith Bogans and Carlos Boozer and knows Joakim Noah casually and has met everybody else on the Bulls in passing. After averaging a career-high 11.9 points for the Clippers last season,

"I'm looking forward to learning this system and fitting in," Butler said. "I just want to be part of the great winning tradition here."

TODAY'S DOGFIGHT

Do you believe NFL owners and players can solve their differences before a lockout? Text "nfl1" for yes or "nfl2" for no to 87708. I'll send you the results.

For the second time this week, this could be the day the NFL shuts down for the season. Or not. No matter what happens, know this: The billionaire owners and millionaire players are fighting over billions of dollars and will do whatever they can to get as much as they can. Remember that the next time your favorite player says he plays to win or for the fans.

GET THE TWEET OUT OF HERE

LeBron James has tweeted some ridiculous things, but what he tweeted Wednesday might be the dumbest. It read, in part, "I have no friends when at WAR besides my Soldiers." There's a lot wrong with what he said, but the random use of caps-lock really is maddening.

THE SHEEN'S WEARING OFF

Of all the bad news to come the Cubs' way, did Charlie Sheen deliver the worst? Sheen tweeted a picture (left) Wednesday of authentic Wrigley Field seats and Chicago-style dogs. It figures an out-of-control, out-of-his-mind douche is a Cubs fan. He might want to get acquainted with a new hash tag: #losing.

'TONIGHT' IS THE NIGHT

TOPHER GRACE, DEMETRI MARTIN
TAKE REDEYE BACK TO THE '80S

The very John Hughes-ian '80s comedy "Take Me Home Tonight" does not make jokes about slap-bracelets. Or side pony-tails. Because, says star Topher Grace, the point was to make a movie celebrating the decade, not mocking it.

"We wanted it to feel like we actually went back in time and really made an '80s movie and just put it in the vault," says Grace, 32, who helped conceive the film's story, "and we took it out of the vault today, blew the dust off of it, and it's an '80s film."

In fact, the movie, in which Grace plays Matt, a 23-year-old MIT grad with no direction other than taking one wild night to win the heart of his high school crush, Tori (Teresa Palmer), actually had been gathering dust.

"Take Me Home Tonight" was mostly finished in 2007, but Grace says the film's abundance of cocaine—hey, it's a movie about the '80s—resulted in studio reluctance to release it, until producers Ron Howard and Brian Grazer ("The Dilemma") came in and took the movie off the shelf.

"We waited and we realized the movie wasn't going to be dated because it was already entirely dated anyway," says Grace, who joined co-star Demetri Martin (playing Matt's longtime friend, Carlos), 37, at the Elysian Hotel to talk about their '80s geekiness and approaching the much-mocked decade with a sense of respect.

Topher Grace and Demetri Martin

LENNY GILMORE/REDEYE

Why do you think when people cover the '80s the inclination is usually, "Let's be ironic about this"?

DM: Maybe it's just easier. I do think there's some sort of connective tissue in collectively remembering things. And maybe it's easier to feel superior as a group. It's like when I look at an old encyclopedia: I'm like, "Constantinople? No! It's Istanbul, stupid."

Do you at least correct it for future generations?

DM: I just correct it and put, "Demetri was here."

TG: The easiest thing to see when you look at that encyclopedia is what was wrong. The first thing we had to do was take out the reference to a huge cell phone or someone saying, "Oh, [CDs]; that will never take off."

So basically everything that happened in "Hot Tub Time Machine."

TG: You know what, to be honest, yeah. I love "The Wedding Singer." That's a really great romantic comedy. But that was only [made] eight years out of the '80s. If we were to make a '90s movie right now it would be very hard to contextualize what the '90s were to people. ... It takes about 20 years like "American Graffiti" or "Dazed and Confused" to say, "Wait a minute, there were a lot of amazing things that happened then and that was my youth. I really want to say something very real about that time."

What do you guys think of when you think about 1988?

DM: I'm old enough that I think of being a freshman in high school. I grew up on the Jersey Shore, actually next to where the show now [takes place]. So for me there's more of a Guido side to what I remember from the '80s. There's a scene where Topher and Dan are driving listening to NWA in a car. [I remember] a dorkier version of that that takes place in New Jersey.

TG: If you can imagine a dorkier version of that.

How would you describe your hairstyle at the time?

DM: As I've gotten older now, I've just relented and my hair kinda grows down. So I figure if I just have enough of it it's a haircut. And if it was shorter it'd just be a Caesar or something, which probably isn't my best look. Back then I hadn't quite figured this out so I'd have to have gel and stuff in my hair.

Topher, what were you into in '88?

TG: My babysitter from fifth grade, in 1988, just texted me this morning, 'cause we went on a radio show this morning and she now lives in Chicago. ... Literally I remember in 1988 making these videos with her in the den. We'd put on plays, me and my sister. It's crazy that I [remember that].

Were you playing Bret Michaels at the time?

TG: Good Lord, no. I was in fifth grade.

Topher, in the film your character is a human calculator. How many times in your lives has math gotten you out of a jam?

DM: If a jam is getting laid, I'd say many times.

Demetri, you mentioned memories of being a geeky kid. Who's geekier between the two of you?

TG: Oh, that's a good question.

DM: That is a good question.

TG: Let's use the math to figure that out.

DM: I was going to say that in the kingdom of geekdom there are many different shires. So we live in maybe parallel shires. I think Topher's very well-versed in "Back to the Future," "Star Wars."

TG: That's my shire.

DM: He's made trailers of things that he likes.

TG: I'm into editing too, yeah.

DM: I think that's definitely geek stuff. Mine is a lonelier corner of palindromes and word puzzles and stuff.

TG: Both equally sexy things that chicks dig.

'80s ENOUGH

"Take Me Home Tonight" is just one in a list of movies and TV shows that beat a dead horse we call "the '80s." Like many before it, the film, opening Friday, uses clichés borrowed from movies that actually were made in the '80s to remind us why movies don't need to revisit the Reagan years ever again. Or do they?

Hilariously awful tale of a jerk

'Beastly'
(PG-13)

Passionately in love with his own appearance, high school hotshot Kyle (Alex Pettyfer) doesn't care about the environment but tells his classmates to elect him president of the "Green Committee" anyway—because he's attractive. Rather than punish the mindless tools who vote for Kyle, witchy outcast Kendra (Mary-Kate Olsen, the opposite of spooky) casts a spell that deforms the arrogant rich boy's face with scars and tattoos. Kyle mopes around but eventually, to break the spell, pursues a pretty wallflower named Lindy (Vanessa Hudgens) who actually liked how forthcoming Kyle was about being a total d-bag.

The buzz: Based on Alex Flinn's novel that modernizes "Beauty and the Beast," "Beastly" strongly argues against movie stardom for Pettyfer and Hudgens, whose performances suggest they think they're playing a concrete block and a feather. Fortunately Neil Patrick Harris is on hand as, yes, Kyle's blind tutor, the only character in the movie whose behavior is funny on purpose.

The verdict: Full of helpful tips on dating strategies, such as how to use underhanded manipulation and blatant stalking, the stunningly terrible "Beastly" spares Kyle any actual humiliation while rewarding his self-serving agenda and newfound compassion for people whose issues have nothing to do with the way they look. Lindy's so oblivious she notices neither that Kyle's eyebrows say "Embrace" and "Suck," nor that, apparently, her trip from New York to Machu Picchu in Peru is being taken by bus. Kyle, too, is a feast of unintentional humor, a spoiled racist whose phony transformation is a blast in the worst way.

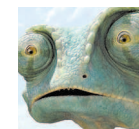

Did you know? Kyle's online profile lists his interests as "anything bangleable." Two points for honesty, point off for vagueness.

Should have been shorter

'Rango' (PG)

Lonely lizard Rango (voiced by Johnny Depp) tumbles out of the family car and into a desert animal society suffering a terrible drought.

The verdict: Well, visually "Rango" looks excellent. Then characters start talking. So what might have been a delightful short and/or silent film becomes an incredibly busy pest of a comedy, leaning on easy jokes (sheesh, a "Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas" reference and the 10 billionth joke mistaking "thespian" for "lesbian") and a misguided belief in its own cleverness. "Rango" fires a lot of bullets, but it evokes only tumbleweeds.

TWITTER REVIEWS

RedEye and Metromix offer the quickest movie reviews in Chicago—140 characters to be exact. And you write them. Send your review to our movie guy, Matt Pais, at twitter.com/mattpais and let the debate begin. Please limit your reviews to ones still in theaters.

Just Go With It

@brookesellschi: Just Go w/ It. Same old story with 2 great comics. Take it from Brooke, get rid of Brooke & it would be 2 thumbs up

@waderobin: "Just Go With It" was great! A hilarious film that has beautiful scences of Hawaii, a biz-zare love story and hot chicks

Drive Angry

@Dobey92: Drive Angry was a fun movie that doesn't take itself seriously and the 3D was better than other big name 3D movies

@philipjohncerza: Drive Angry was everything I wanted/needed it to be: kicking soundtrack, hilarious, not the Oscars.

Others

@Hairy_Lime: "Hall Pass" Sorry I [bleeped] you off at a Q&A Peter Farrelly, but still, please be funnier. Dud script. Decent jokes.

Amber Heard and Nicolas Cage in 'Drive Angry'

@jenniferstraub: Cedar Rapids was hilarious. Exactly the kind of comedy that's been missing on the big screen for a long time.

@DavidHardinFit: I know it's been out for a while, just saw 127 hours. Wow, what an amazing movie! Had me full of emotion!

@LtDaleNippler: Gnomeo & Juliet: Bastardized Shakespeare (they lived!?) & Elton crammed his songs in everywhere. Both tragedies.

@salkken: You'll never guess the end! Liam Neeson unmasks himself in Unknown. Not intense like Taken but strong film.

@tylerADrock: Green Hornet=Scott Pilgrim Vs. The World+Naked Gun+Pineapple Express. But somehow, in that equation, someone screwed up. Bad.

@j_guillen0317: The Roommate — pretty creepy but I still think waking up to find 1 or both of my roommates naked was creepier.

Matt Damon and Emily Blunt in 'The Adjustment Bureau'

'The Adjustment Bureau'

'Bureau' flaunts the power of love

Hotshot politician David Norris (Matt Damon) isn't as focused on his career after he meets beautiful dancer Elise (Emily Blunt). One problem: A group of mysterious men who have the ability to freeze time and manipulate space insist that, according to "the plan," David and Elise aren't meant to be together.

The buzz: At times "The Adjustment Bureau" feels like a remake of "Serendipity"—if the lovebirds were being overseen by the creeps in "Dark City" (with maybe a few teaspoons of "The Truman Show" and "Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind" thrown in). "Bureau," which originally was scheduled for release last fall, actually is expanded from a short story by Philip K. Dick and written and directed by George Nolfi, who co-wrote

"The Bourne Ultimatum."

The verdict: The mix of science fiction and romantic comedy can't help but slip past intriguing and into goofily ridiculous. So what? With a little suspension of disbelief "The Adjustment Bureau" becomes deliriously romantic, with Damon and Blunt's chemistry perfectly capturing love's ability to supersede all. David ultimately makes a choice that could be seen as selfish until you remember what the bureau eventually learns: Life, and people, are unpredictable and capable of much more than you think. So sci-fi buffs may feel unsatisfied, but date night will soar from the presentation of love as a fantastic, possibly permanent distraction.

MATT PAIS IS REDEYE'S MOVIE CRITIC AND METROMIX MUSIC PRODUCER.

'Adjustment' flick one in long line inspired by author

St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Philip K. Dick had a flair for spinning science fiction scenarios that were well within the orbit of paranoia. In his novels and short stories, he addressed the tricks of memory and the quirks of reality.

Once dismissed as a mere purveyor of pulp fiction, Dick—who died in 1982—now is recognized as a major American writer. Still, he's best known for inspiring some of the most imaginative films to come out of Hollywood in recent decades.

The latest addition to Dick's filmography is "The Adjustment Bureau," opening Friday. In the film, the budding relationship between a politician (Matt Damon) and a dancer (Emily Blunt) attracts the attention of mysterious, hat-wearing men who are determined to keep them apart. Here are four essential films that Philip K. Dick inspired.

'Blade Runner' 1982

Director: Ridley Scott

Star: Harrison Ford

Source: "Do Androids Dream of Electric Sheep?" (novel)

Ford plays Rick Deckard, a burnt-out police operative charged with executing, or "retiring," androids that have defied authority and returned to Earth from a space colony.

'Total Recall' 1990

Director: Paul Verhoeven

Star: Arnold Schwarzenegger

Source: "We Can Remember It For You Wholesale" (short story)

Schwarzenegger has one of his best roles as a construction worker whose memories might not reflect his actual past. The film won an Oscar for visual effects.

'Minority Report' 2002

Director: Steven Spielberg

Star: Tom Cruise

Source: "The Minority Report" (short story)

Drug-addicted cop John Anderton (Cruise), who arrests people before they can commit murder, takes it on the lam when he becomes the target of this own "pre-crime" unit.

'A Scanner Darkly' 2006

Director: Richard Linklater

Star: Keanu Reeves

Source: "A Scanner Darkly" (novel)

The war on drugs is the jumping-off point for this tale of an undercover narcotics detective (Reeves) who becomes hooked on an illegal substance.

With as many gadgets as most of us carry around—cellphone, MP3 player, iPad—it's good to know that a thin, light camera such as the Easyshare won't add much weight. In addition to convenient size, the Kodak takes quality 14 megapixel images and has a Share Button which allows you to tag photos on the camera and upload them to Facebook, YouTube or Flickr. Easy indeed. RYAN SMITH FOR REDEYE

SONG
'Hit the Lights' Jay Sean

Jay Sean's "Hit the Lights," which features his label boss, Lil Wayne, continues the odd revival of late-'80s house music on today's pop charts. With a high-energy chorus that would have been seen as aggressive back in the day, "Hit the Lights" fits in nicely next to recent hits from Enrique Iglesias and Chris Brown, while still taking the sound to the next level. It's catchy, though kind of mindless, making it perfect to be the next big club anthem. GLENN GAMBOA, NEWSDAY

'Taking on Tyson'

TV
"Taking on Tyson"

9 p.m. Sunday, Animal Planet

Three things surprised me about "Taking on Tyson": A. Former heavyweight champ Mike Tyson always has found "peace and comfort" in raising pigeons; B. Pigeon racing is a huge sport; and C. Tyson, who served three years in prison for rape, bit off part of Evander Holyfield's ear and kisses his pigeons on this show, is not the oddest duck we meet.

An added bonus: At 8:30 and 11:45 p.m., AMC will give viewers a first look at its new series, "The Killing." In the moody, tense series, a detective's dedication is tested while investigating the murder of a high school girl. CURT WAGNER, REDEYE

Liquid-nitrogen waffles? Don't tell us you're not curious

By Lisa Arnett, Erin Brereton and Erin Sarris

From a lunch-worthy sushi spot in the Loop to a BYOB-for-now brunch hangout in Lakeview, the latest crop of new restaurants is ready to shake up your weekend routine.

Now open

Lure

2017 S. Wells St. 312-225-8989

Chinatown gets a new izakaya (a Japanese pub for casual snacking and drinking) from Kee Chan, the chef and owner of Mulan, the restaurant that shuttered in this same address back in 2007. Graze on small plates piled with grilled baby squid, sweet corn-potato croquettes or black cod ravioli. Wine and cocktails will join the menu as soon as the liquor license arrives.

Kingfisher Seafood Restaurant & Bar

5721 N. Clark St. 773-506-7014

Seafood is king at this Andersonville newcomer, a re-boot of chef Peter McCarthy's shuttered Pier 5736 in Jefferson Park. Classic dishes play to the simplicity and flavor of fresh seafood, from oysters Rockefeller to a crab cake packed with blue crab to the splurge-worthy duo of lobster tails. Stop in for Sunday brunch to chow down on citrus French toast and poached egg-topped salmon cakes.

Ing

951 W. Fulton Market 855-834-6464

At the latest creation from Homaro Cantu and his team of culinary wizards at Moto, the view from your table might include staff hand-pulling ramen noodles, blasting liquid nitrogen to craft a frozen waffle dessert, or carrying glasses of quirky beers brewed with green tea and honey or sage and cranberries. After starting limited reservations in mid-February, it officially opened Tuesday. Read our review online at metromix.com.

Cafeteria Siboney

2161 N. Western Ave. 773-278-5417

Bucktown restaurant Siboney Cuban Cuisine just opened this quick-service sibling next door serving up freshly pressed Cuban sandwiches, fried sweet plantains and your daily buzz in the form of cups of Cuban coffee.

Hot Woks Cool Sushi

312 W. Adams St. 312-220-0011

The local mini-empire of sushi and stir-fry spots opened its biggest location yet across the street from the Willis Tower, serving new dishes such as salmon bacon salad with red tobiko, cranberries, honey-dill dressing and salmon that's pan-fried to a bacon-like crispness. Sip tongue-tingling cocktails such as the ginger- and jalapeno-laced Dragon Fire while you size up Art Institute student Jeff Pak's ribbon-like sculpture that winds along the dining room's ceiling and ends with a large Buddha above the sushi bar.

Kanela Breakfast Club

3231 N. Clark St. 773-248-1622

Named after the Greek word for cinnamon, this Lakeview eatery is still working out its opening kinks but has plenty of potential in its menu of banana split crepes, pork-belly eggs Benedict and cinnamon-spiced pancakes with brown sugar butter. It's BYOB for now, so bring a bottle of bubbly to make your own mimosas. Read our brunch review online at metromix.com.

More recent openings

Kai Sushi (1406 W. Grand Ave. 312-733-9083) adds yet another choice to West Town's BYOB sushi scene.

Flaco's Tacos in Printer's Row opened a sibling taqueria in River North (46 E. Chicago Ave. 312-266-8226)

Quick-serve Mediterranean eatery Petite Pita (3952 N. Sheridan Road 773-281-2008) has replaced Lakeview's Sumo Grill.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

#PitchforkMusicFestival tickets go on sale Friday. Who should headline this year? Why?

Here are some answers we liked from Twitter and Facebook. Follow @mmxmusic and watch for next week's question.

TWITTER

BopCityBeats
Headliner for #Pitchfork? @TVonTheRadio. New album in April = Time for a tour! I'd love to see @StarSlingerUK spin a DJ set too.

CT_Be_Me
RE:Pfork The Strokes. New album after 5 years. Good at Lolla playing old stuff. Smaller venue, new & old tunes - dangerous.

stacynewms
KANYE! Perfect

place to hold his hometown come-back concert and his new album is so amazing. By now we're used to his meltdowns.

neil411
PJ Harvey!

FACEBOOK

Andrew Kent
As long as it is a hipster indie rock band that no one has ever heard of, I'm in!

Nooneinteresting
Orimporant
Primal Scream ... are one of the best live bands out there. Upside Down: The Creation Records Story (documentary) is creating a massive buzz for them as well as The Jesus & Mary Chain, My Bloody Valentine and other Creation Records alumni. It just makes sense.

Henry Herrera
Charlie Sheen because all he does is WIN! #CharlieSheen-IsAHellOfADrug

Cristina Querubim
Yeah Yeah Yeahs, Metric, Delta Spirit

IT'S PDA SEASON

Which hot young Hollywood stars are hooking up?

By Ariel Alexovich | REDEYE

Spring fever seems to have hit Hollywood early this year, as a slew of young stars made the unusual choice to publicly step out with single people of the opposite sex. (It's OK, publicists, take a deep breath.) How real are these relationships? We have no idea. But showmance or not, they all sure look pretty. Here's a handy guide to their public displays of affection. GETTY IMAGES PHOTOS

PDA METER: HOLDING HANDS IN THE HALLWAY  CAUGHT BEHIND THE BLEACHERS

Selena Gomez & Justin Bieber

Spotted together at Vanity Fair's Oscars party, out on the town for Bieber's 17th birthday

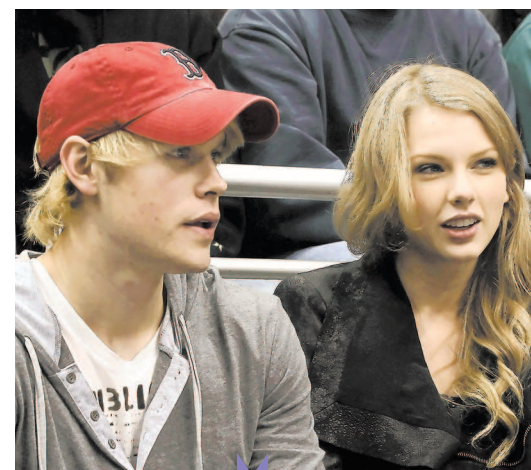

After weeks of are-they-or-aren't-they, the couple all but put those rumors to rest when they got handsy on Oscars night—and when Justin gave the paparazzi the bird when they got too close to him and his lady.

Josh Hutcherson & Vanessa Hudgens

Spotted together at the "Beastly" premiere after-party in L.A., the Independent Spirit Awards, Elton John's Oscars party

The ex-"High School Musical" starlet has been photographed with Laser from "The Kids Are All Right" several times lately, and a people.com source says "their arms were wrapped around each other and they were really touchy."

Chord Overstreet & Taylor Swift

Spotted together at an L.A. Kings hockey game, Harvey Weinstein's pre-Oscars party

It's hard to keep all the T-Swift dating rumors straight (hello, Owl City guy), but could her romance with "Glee's" Overstreet really be something? Eonline.com says Chord "would playfully touch her arm, and she couldn't stop smiling" at a pre-Oscars party.

Chace Crawford & Emma Roberts

Spotted together at Sundance Film Festival, Elton John's Oscars party

Chace and Emma have been promoting their indie flick "Twelve" lately, but an Us Weekly source suggests they're more than just colleagues. "Emma is clearly smitten with Chace," the mag reports.

What would David do?

David Beckham fancies himself a bit of a Jesus figure. The British soccer stud recently debuted his newest tattoo, an image of Jesus being carried by three boy cherubs—and not coincidentally, Beckham has three sons. In an accompanying video posted on his Facebook page, Beckham says, “My thought of it is, at some point, my boys are going to need to look after me, and that’s what they’re doing in the picture.”

Woman on ‘Woman’

Wonder Woman’s nemesis is bisexual? Maybe. Elizabeth Hurley has been cast as the villain in the pilot of the rebooted series, online.com reports. But in perhaps more interesting news, the character she appears to be playing “loves men, but likes women” and may secretly have a thing for Wonder Woman. Well, who can blame her?

25 HOURS, 17 MINUTES

That’s the time it took @charliesheen to reach 1 million followers on Twitter this week. Guinness approved the time as a world record.

Paging Ms. Jones

Every woman’s favorite drunken Brit is on her way back. Helen Fielding, author of “Bridget Jones’s Diary” has confirmed that a third Bridget book and movie are in the works, the London Evening Standard reports. We can only assume that means Renee Zellweger is on board, but there’s no word whether Colin Firth or Hugh Grant will be back.
